Carpenters Workshop Gallery's Le Gaillard. This observation is glamorously demonstrated by the Kundan mirror cabinet (£45,000; edition of eight) designed by Nipa Doshi and Jonathan Levien for Galerie Kreo. Its rhythmic decoration of geometric motifs and tiny inlaid mirrors was inspired by embellishments on the mud-constructed interiors of nomadic houses in Kutch, western India. An equally irresistible narrative is found in Doshi Levien's asymmetric Shanty cabinet (£7,507) for BD Barcelona Design, which captures the patchwork of colourful corrugated surfaces used in improvised dwellings

(it's actually made from lacquered MDF). With each door opening in a different way, the haphazard nature of this unconventional cabinet belies a rational approach to storage.

While Shanty appears to emulate reused refuse, the Sushi cabinet (from £62,000, pictured on opening pages; edition of eight), designed by Fernando and Humberto Campana of Estudio Campana, employs excess materials from manufacturing to replicate the mash-up of favelas in their native Brazil (a conceptual favour repaid by the brothers' direct involvement in these communities) and reflects the bold palette of contemporary abstract art. Storage, it seems, is no longer just a hideaway, but an artwork in its own right. ♦
